In addition to being more expensive, LiPo batteries also tend to die earlier compares to Li-ion batteries.
A LiPo battery typically starts to show a decline in performance after about 200 to 300 full recharge cycles. This is a massive downgrade considering that standard rechargeable Li-ion batteries available today can survive up to 1000 cycles.

As you might have noticed by now, LiPo batteries don't like high temperatures. A study that compared the rate of performance decline of LiPo batteries during storage showed that a battery stored at 25 degrees Celsius retained 96% of its capacity while another battery stored at 60 degrees Celsius deteriorated to around 75% of its capacity.
