You'll notice that the AAS doesn't share any links to Amazon, eBay or other online marketplaces.

When should I buy solar eclipse glasses?

If you plan on partaking in the viewing, we strongly suggest grabbing a pair of eclipse glasses before Monday. When ordering solar eclipse glasses online, be sure that both the vendor and the glasses' manufacturer are included on the American Astronomical Society's (AAS) list of approved glasses sellers and makers.

Are solar eclipse glasses still in stock?

Many vendors on the AAS' list of approved solar eclipse glasses vendors still have glasses in stock, with guaranteed shipping before the big event. Read our guide below on how to find a pair of safe, ISO-certified eclipse glasses, then order yours as soon as possible!

Are eclipse glasses endorsed by NASA?

As the AAS points out, in the past, some eclipse glasses sellers hosted even on the most reputable sites--including Amazon and eBay--listed products that weren't properly tested, and some of them claimed to be approved or endorsed by NASA, which is not true, considering NASA does not approve or endorse products.

Should you buy solar eclipse filters & glasses?

If you're among the millions of people expecting to view the next eclipse, make sure you purchase solar eclipse filters and glasses from reputable manufacturers. There have been reports that some companies are selling counterfeit products labeled as if they conform to international safety standards.
