How much solar power will Brazil have in 2024?

By August of this year, an additional 8 GW of solar capacity had already been installed, comprising 5.2 GW of distributed generation and 2.8 GW of centralized generation. Sources told pv magazine that Brazil is expected to see a continuation of this level of new installations in 2024, with growth to recover in 2025.

Who will be at the solar energy conference in Germany?

Also attending will be Abigail Hopper, president of SEIA, the US solar energy industry association, and David Wedepohl, director of international relations at the Bundesverband Solarwirtschaft (BSW), the main representative entity for the solar energy and energy storage sectors in Germany.
