

Hyper Dyne Side Arms (1/4 scale) is a horizontally scrolling shooter developed and released by Capcom as an arcade video game in 1986. The player takes control of a flying mecha fighter who must battle an alien army. Side Arms uses a two-directional attacking system similar to Capcom's previous shoot-'em-up Section Z. Plot. An evil alien empire known as the Zonoids.

Many of us began our shooting experience with a .22 rifle. That's because the .22 rimfire cartridge is the most prolific round with the most varied chamberings of any cartridge ever fielded. The .22 rim-fire cartridge has a rich history beginning in 1845 when Frenchman, Louis-Nicolas Flobert invented the first rimfire metallic cartridge named the 6mm Flobert cartridge.

Phoenix Arms suggests ammo rated at 1050-1150 fps (subsonic). I've only put about 100 rounds through one of mine so far and the only malfunction has been one FTE, I've been using Federal bulk pack 1260 fps in it. I have two Phoenix Arms HP22A's, one range kit with both the 3" and 5" barrel (black) and one with only the 3" barrel (nickel).

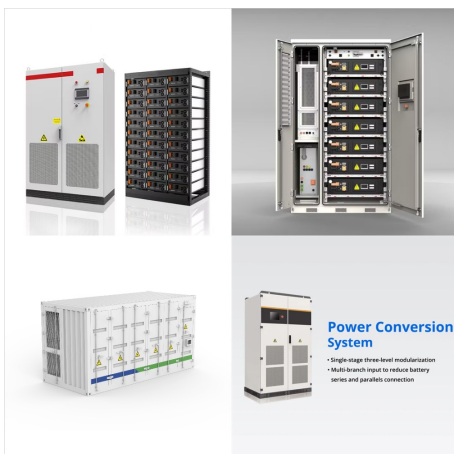

Ballistic gel testing is often tailored toward visualizing the performance of handgun cartridges out of handgun-length barrels. But both the Velocitor and Hyper Speed are designed as hunting loads with a .22 rifle in mind. With that in mind, I broke out my trusty Browning SA-22 and hit a new bare block from a distance of 25 yards.
