

Does vexilar lithium work with a V-410 Charger?

A Vexilar Lithium battery can be charged with a V-410 Charger. Do not attempt to charge other brands of Lithium batteries with the V-410 Charger. Disconnect the battery before charging. Recharge the battery after every use, even if the battery status indicators show 100%.

Do I need to charge my vexilar battery?

Yes, you must charge it fully before first use. The power supply options for fishing with Vexilar systems are changing: anglers now have the option of using traditional SLA (Sealed Lead Acid) batteries or the next generation of battery, Vexilar Lithium. Regardless of the battery type, maintaining it properly is the key to years of reliable use.

Can I use a Standard VEX charger on a lithium battery?

If by "standard vex charger" you mean the original sealed-lead acid battery charger that came with many models, like the flx28, then no you cannot and should not try to use it on a lithium battery. I attached a photo of one of mine, and it has an output of 13.5 volts at 1 amp, which is not safe for lithium batteries.

Is it OK to disconnect a vexilar battery?

Vexilar says this is OK as long as you disconnect once the battery is charged (don't leave it on the charger for a long time). According to your post, you do not recommend this? Vexilar sells their new lithium battery with the same V410 charger that is used for regular lead batteries.
