August 16, 2009 China Glaze Solar Power with nail art The base is China Glaze Solar Power, the dots were done with OPI Greenwich Village and the lines with OPI Alpine Snow. This is the first nail art I ever attempted and I think it turned out pretty well.

As depicted in Fig. 3 a and Fig. 3 c, around 86 % of solar power plants, constituting 108 GW of installed capacity, are primarily concentrated in northwest, north, central, and east China. In the northwest region, solar power plants with areas larger than 4 km² are predominantly situated in provinces such as Qinghai, Inner Mongolia, and

The color itself would be fine if it didn't have that ugly pearl shimmer that you don't easily notice in the bottle but you definitely see on the nail. Bright yellow and pearl

China is the largest market in the world for both photovoltaics and solar thermal energy. The photovoltaic industry began by making panels for satellites, and transitioned to the manufacture of domestic panels in the late 1990s. [1] After substantial government incentives were introduced in 2011, China's solar power market grew dramatically: the country became the world's leading ???

China Glaze Nail Polish in Solar Power nail polish. However, this brush is really easy to use, and I actually managed to apply Solar Power to my nails without too much damage. The color definitely shows up on my nails and isn't sheer at all like some of the more crappier nail polishes I've tried. Also, I love the consistency of the
