An Ocean of Solar Energy. Using this method means it's easier to transport in 40ft containers and quick to install, compared with arrays of pontoons, which are more difficult to anchor and also suffer greater fatigue from the forces of the waves in the ocean, says Bjørneklett. The company is a spin-out from Dutch shipbuilder Damen

Floating solar, also known as floating photovoltaic (FPV) or floatovoltaics, is any solar array that floats on top of a body of water. Solar panels must be affixed to a buoyant structure that keeps them above the surface. If you come across a floating solar installation, it's most likely located in a lake or basin because the waters are generally calmer than the ocean.

"Floating solar is a rather new [renewable energy] option, but it has huge potential globally," says Thomas Reindl, deputy chief executive of the Solar Energy Research Institute of Singapore (Seris).
