What is a backup power system?

A UPS, or uninterruptible power system, provides backup power when your regular power source fails or voltage drops to an unacceptable level. A UPS is like a backup battery, designed for the safe, orderly shutdown of a computer and connected equipment. How do I test electrical equipment?

What happens if you don't have a backup power solution?

When disasters strike, whether natural or man-made, your facility's day-to-day operations stand the risk of complete shutdown. Without a dependable backup power solution, you're vulnerable to lost data, production time, and revenues.

How do you calculate backup power?

Use the following formula for a rough estimate: battery time equals battery capacity divided by discharge rate. Once those numbers are calculated, backup power can be found by adding up the power consumption of all critical loads that require backup power and multiplying this by the number of hours you need the backup power to last.
