Just kidding. I have never used the evolution trainer system but have read several times the engines work better with them removed. It sounds like you are rich on the low end card adjustment. Do the fuel line pinch test. Adjust the high speed to full power with just a little rich. Then go to idle and and pinch the fuel line.

Dont mess with the Trainer Power system The 3 bladed prop has HORRIBLE performance and the metal engine mount that comes with the engine is very heavy [:"(] The Evolution engine are GREAT though, get the .46 NX and put it on a glass mount with an APC prop and you will be happy The Evolution starts easily, runs good, and has lots of power

Hi all! I have an Evolution Trainer Power System (for a .40 size trainer) that I purchased about 3 years ago. I have since stripped the heads of 2 of the screws and had to break the spinner to get it off. I then purchased a new spinner just for this engine, but it didn"t come with any screws to hold the cone part on!
