Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) cause high levels of stress, which if frequent and prolonged can dramatically change how the brain develops. This report reflects collected data about adult respondents' childhood experiences related to abuse, neglect, and household challenges from the 2016 and 2018 GA Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance System.

The preliminary summary of the results of that data collection have been released in the Georgia Data Summary report. An additional full-length report is still in development, but the summary gives us some good information about ACEs in Georgia. The ACE module was not added to the 2017 BRFSS, but it is currently added to the 2018 survey.
