What is gretina (gamma-ray energy in-beam nuclear array)?

Between 2003 and 2011, the US low-energy nuclear physics community constructed GRETINA (Gamma-Ray Energy In-beam Nuclear Array) [2,3], a 1p tracking detector optimized for fast-beam nuclear physics experiments and employing the same segmented detector and signal-decomposition technology as GRETA.

What is grata & how can it help FRIB?

GRETA will be a key instrument at FRIB, capable of reconstructing the energy and three-dimensional position of g-ray interactions.

How many -ray tracking detectors does gretina support?

GRETA expands the existing GRETINA array to subtend the full 4p coverage of g-ray tracking detectors. The project scope covers the procurement of 18 Quad Detector Modules, as well as the design, assembly, integration, and testing of the Electronics, Computing, and Mechanical Systems to support all 30 Quad Modules.
