"The NeoVolt battery can independently power only one of the three phases if the grid is down, but with the grid up, all phases power can be offset by the battery with a three-phase smart meter. Since our home meters are upgraded to net smart meters, they will calculate your usage based on total input and total output for AC coupling systems.

A battery cycle is defined as one charge and discharge. With most home storage batteries cycled on a daily basis, 4,000 cycles equates to a life of 10.95 years. The 6,000 cycles from NeoVolta translates to 16.5 years of useful life, based on a full charge and discharge. If the homeowner discharges less battery, the lifetime is generally longer.
