

Did the Sun unleash a powerful solar flare?

The Sun has unleashed a powerful solar flare, Nasa has said. The flare, designated X2.3, belongs to the most intense X class of flares. It was spotted by Nasa's Solar Dynamics Observatory, which is constantly monitoring the surface of the Sun in part to spot such events.

What causes a lack of Sun?

The lack of sun has been caused by a spell of high pressure- this is also known as an anticyclone. While high pressure typically blocks rain fronts and is associated with warm, sunny days, it can also result in an 'anticyclonic gloom'.

Will a NASA probe orbit the Sun?

NASA/JPL-Caltech; NASA/JPL-Caltech The probe will orbit the sun 'close enough to pass inside a solar eruption, like a surfer diving under a crashing ocean wave,' NASA said.
