

What planets are on display in a sky show?

The half dozen worlds on display will be Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune, but they won't all be easy to spot--and you'll have to get up early to see them at all. Here's what to know to take in this latest sky show. What is a parade of planets?

What is a planetary alignment?

A planetary alignment, or a "planet parade" according to the internet, where we'll see six planets - Jupiter, Mercury, Uranus, Mars, Neptune and Saturn - grace our sky in the predawn hours, according to StarWalk.space, a stargazing and astronomical website. How does the alignment happen? The planets orbit the sun continuously in the solar system.

When is the planetary alignment visible?

The alignment will be visible in the days before and after March 28, but that date will be the best day for observation. To easily view the planetary alignment, Star Walk recommends using the astronomy app Sky Tonight. When pointing your device to the sky, the app will display a live representation of the sky above.

Which planets will be in a planetary parade?

Topping off the planetary parade will be Mars, sitting in a straight line up from Jupiter, Mercury, Venus, Uranus and the moon. It's easy to pick out because of its signature orange tint, Hummels added. The planets will all appear "kind of like pearls on a necklace" across the night sky, Hummels said.

Why do planets have a slider control?

The reason is that the app has a slider control which changes the orbits of the planets from a diagrammatical view (i.e. all the planets in nice neat, equally separated, circular orbits) to a real view (i.e. all the planets in elliptical orbits with all the inner planets squashed in next to the Sun and the outer planets being widely spaced).

What planets can you see with a telescope?

Not all of the planets will be equally visible. Bright-red Mars and giant Saturn will be the easiest to see with the naked eye. Mercury and Jupiter won't be quite as conspicuous. Uranus and Neptune, meanwhile--the most remote of the group--will require high-power binoculars or a telescope. When can I spot the planets?
