

Dream catchers are beautiful and meaningful objects that have been used for centuries to protect people from bad dreams and negative energy. Traditionally, dream catchers were made from natural materials like feathers, beads, and sinew, but today, people also make dream catchers from a variety of other materials, including paper plates.

Dream catchers, which were created by an indigenous group of people living in North America called the Ojibwa, generally consist of a hoop with net or a web inside and hanging feathers and beads. The idea is that a dream catcher is hung above someone's bed while they sleep, and during the night bad dreams get trapped in the web so they're
